R.E.

- Our school follows the Ealing Agreed Syllabus for Religious Education Religion and worldviews which covers aspects of different religions including Hinduism, Judaism, Buddhism, Christianity, Islam and Sikhism. Within the syllabus, children also study the philosophy of Humanism.
- Our curriculum is reflective of our community and the diverse multi-religious and multi-secular society we live in. It aims to be accessible and engaging for those of faith, non-faith, and indeterminate faith.
- Our children acquire a core knowledge and understanding of the beliefs and practices of the religions and worldviews. They develop understanding of the fundamental beliefs of religions, how people express their belief, and how it influences their lives.
- Children develop confidence in their own beliefs and values while developing respect, tolerance and sensitivity when considering different perspectives or beliefs of those that are different from their own.
- They develop understanding of the role religion plays in contributing to a cohesive and compassionate society while making sense of their own place in the world.
- Children are provided with a range of opportunities to engage with British Values and consider spiritual and moral questions addressed by religion and philosophy in order to further reflect on human culture.
